

Jeff Lewis

Jeff's current role is Viator's Vice President of Technology Strategy, which involves searching the globe for the best technology, ideas and businesses to complement or extend our mission of helping people around the world plan and enjoy their perfect trip. Jeff's current focus is supplier connectivity, ensuring content and bookings are accurate to ensure the best experience possible for our operators and travellers.

Jeff was previously Vice President, Engineering for Viator and where he spent a decade managing the software development and IT infrastructure teams through that hyper growth period.

Since the acquisition of Viator by TripAdvisor in 2014, Jeff has been involved in many challenging and exciting initiatives to scale and integrate Experiences into the world's largest travel site.
